Dear colleagues,

Today we commemorate Anzac Day. We honour those who served our country and those who still serve today in the protection of our nation and its people.

Proudly, Metro North holds long links to Australia's defence services and there are many veterans and current service people across our organisation including in our trauma, intensive care and surgical services. These people bring unique skills and experiences to Metro North and remind us of the honourable nature of the work we perform each day in the service of our community.

The values and ethos of Metro North certainly hold commonalities with the spirit of the Anzacs. The dedication to service, teamwork, camaraderie, integrity, working together and supporting each other to overcome challenges, all directed towards the shared purpose of helping others achieve better health.

As we honour the Anzacs, we also acknowledge the experiences of many families and friends whose loved ones have served and those who have died, and the impact this has had on our nation.

Please take a moment today to reflect on the spirit of the Anzacs and how their significant service and sacrifice played a key role in the quality of the lives we lead today.

The Last Post will be played across our Metro North facilities this morning followed by a minute's silence. Some of our facilities are also hosting and supporting special Anzac Day services which all staff, patients and visitors are welcome to attend. Details of these are below:
