Hi Everyone,

Today is Remembrance Day, when we honour the memory of those who served in the First World War and the many who never made it home.

On 11 November 1918, silence fell on the Western Front after four years of gunfire.

Our hospitals and facilities have a long and rich connection with the Australian Defence Forces, and many staff over the years have served and continue to serve our country.

Today we honour their service.

Across our facilities at 11am we will pause to play The Last Post and observe a minute's silence:

- RBWH – a message will be played over public address system, followed by The Last Post
- STARS, Caboolture and Redcliffe Hospitals - The Last Post will be played over public address system
- TPCH – a service will be held in the Multi-Faith Centre from 10.45am and The Last Post will be played over public address system
- COH - services at residential care facilities. The Last Post will be played over public address system at other facilities.

From the Ode of Remembrance:
They shall grow not old, as we that are left grow old:
Age shall not weary them, nor the years condemn.
At the going down of the sun and in the morning,
We will remember them.

Lest we forget.
Nick.
