

Royal Australasian College of Surgeons (RACS) and Jamison Trauma Institute (JTI) invite you to the 2023 Trauma Symposium: e-Mobility – current perspectives and future directions

Date: Friday 17 November 2023

Time: 9am to 4pm

Venue: Education Precinct Function Room - Queensland University of Technology – Kelvin Grove Campus, Brisbane

RACS Trauma Week brings together trauma professionals from Australia and New Zealand to address issues relating to trauma prevention and trauma care. This year's topic - e-mobility – Current perspectives and future directions – explores the e-mobility trend that has seen an explosion of e-scooters on roads and paths in cities around the world. Since their introduction, e-scooter related trauma has increased substantially, with injuries and deaths in riders, passengers and pedestrians placing further pressure on first responders as well as hospital and health systems.

Trauma Committee members, Kate Martin FRACS and Prof Kirsten Vallmuur, JTI, will convene the symposium which will address the current perspective - legislation, injury statistics, patterns of injury, risk factors, lessons from the field – ambulance, ED, trauma, coroners, surveillance and future directions/potential solutions.
