

Early and Mid career researcher Workshop: Navigating a research career in the hospital sector

Tuesday, 8 September 2020, 12:00pm – 1:30pm
Workshop on TEAMS live

Topics covered:

- Challenges and enablers for doing clinical research
- Common themes and solutions for career progression of emerging researchers in the hospital setting
- Using research skills and knowledge to enhance your clinical practice?

This session is designed for aspiring early and mid-career clinical researchers who are considering, doing, completing or completed a research higher degree.

Facilitated by

Professor Janet Davies, Assistant Director Research, MNHHS

Dr Dylan Flaws, Head of Mental Health Research – Critical Care Research Group
Associate Professor (adjunct) – QUT, Psychiatry Advanced Trainee – RBWH

A panel of peers from medical, allied health and nursing streams will overview their research and consider the challenges and enablers that helped them successfully undertake clinical research in the hospital sector.

There will be a series of short research presentations, a panel discussion and opportunity for virtual audience participation.

This session will be a forum for ideation on research pathways and future networking topics.
